Men May Live Vigorous, Hale and Hearty for 100 Years

Prime of Life at 80 Years of Age

Man thoughtlessly has been dying too young. Dr. Lyman Beecher Sperry in his recent address on the "Science of Life," before the Y. M. C. A. of Chicago, said that man may live possessed of his faculties and useful for 150 years. Professor Elie Metchnikoff, the eminent Russian scientist, after a life of research and scientific study, says that we can successfully combat old age. The fact that a person can live to be over 100 years old in the enjoyment of strength and health has been proven by many of our physicians and scientists and 4,000 hale and hearty old men and women, all of whom, either in their practice as doctors or by actual use, have become familiar with the life-prolonging, health-giving powers of Duffy's Pure Malt Whiskey.

VIGOROUS AT 108 YEARS OF AGE.

Edward Noy, of Unity Corners, N. H., born in 1797, and a Hero of Two Wars, writes:—

"An old man's life can be a happy one if he is well, and I have been just as active and strong up to a few years ago as I was during the war in the South. My family and friends are all gone, but I am cheerful and hope to live some time yet. I was born in what is now Unity Corners, N. H., in 1797."

I have been better well all my life, but when I began to grow weak my doctor told me it was old age and gave me Duffy's Pure Malt Whiskey. I am taking that medicine now and it is both medicine and nourishment to me. I cannot eat a hearty meal the way I used to, but Duffy's keeps me up and going. I would not be alive without it."

108, FEELS LIKE A GIRL.

Hasn't a Fair, Does the Hardest Kind of Housework.

"Gentlemen—I am 108 years old. I am well, without a pain or ache. I sleep as well as I did when I was a girl. I use your whiskey and like it very much. Duffy's Pure Malt Whiskey is the only medicine I use. I get water from the well, bring in wood and do my housework."—Mrs. LOUISA COX, Harrington, Maine.

If you wish to keep young, strong and vigorous and have on your cheeks the roses of health and retain full possession of your mental powers you must take Duffy's Pure Malt Whiskey regularly as directed and avoid drugs of all kinds.

It restores the vitality, no matter how weak or feeble it may have become; feeds and enriches the blood and stimulates the circulation, giving health and power to body, brain, nerve and muscle. It is invaluable for overworked men, delicate women and sickly children.

The absolute purity of Duffy's Pure Malt Whiskey is attested by the fact that thousands of doctors and hospitals use it exclusively and that it is the only whiskey that is recognized as a medicine. It contains no fusel oil.

CAUTION.—When you ask for Duffy's Pure Malt Whiskey be sure you get the genuine, which is put up in sealed bottles only. It is never sold in bulk. Dishonest dealers will try to sell you cheap imitations and substitutes, which are put on the market for profit only and which are positively harmful. Demand Duffy's and be sure you get it. It is sold by all reliable druggists and grocers. Look for the trade mark, the "Old Chemist," on the label, and be sure the seal over the cork is unbroken. If a dealer offers to sell you Duffy's Pure Malt Whiskey in bulk, report same to us and, when proven, we will pay you a reward.

Dr. Alderman Arouses Interest On His St. Louis Visit

Distinguished President of Our University Given a Continuous Ovation During His Brief Western Trip.

Editor Times-Dispatch:

Dr. Alderman has come and gone. Whatever reputation preceded him, in the slang of the street "he has more than made good." To use the expression of perhaps the first citizen of St. Louis, a man of great wealth, and using it freely for the public good. "The visit of such a man to St. Louis is a distinct contribution to the higher life of the city. Every one who has met and heard him feels elevated thereby." He came as the guest of the Virginia Society of St. Louis, and his first formal appearance was at the banquet of the society on Monday evening, the 26th, at the St. Louis Club. The society, composed of the Virginians and descendants of Virginians in St. Louis, had invited a number of distinguished guests, so it may be truly said a more representative gathering of the city's life rarely ever sat down to a banquet table. The kitchen and the wine cellar had contributed their best; the table was banked with American Beauty roses, and the beauty and dignity of the surroundings formed a fit setting for the brilliant speaker as he rose to receive a splendid ovation. He spoke in the same banquet hall where, a few nights before, Secretary Root had delivered a most able speech on "Our South American Relations."

The difference in the style of the speech of the two men was marked. Secretary Root's was cool, deliberate, unimpassioned, like one making an argument to the Supreme Court and asking for their judgment. Dr. Alderman's speech, exquisite in its literary finish as it was strong and forceful in its matter, suggested Mr. Root's predecessor, the late John Hay, delivering his memorable address of welcome to the Press Parliament of the World at the Louisiana Purchase Exposition. His subject was "The Spirit of the South." It is not my purpose to comment upon the matter or style of the speech; I am simply giving impressions. His opening sentence caught the ear of every listener, and from that time to his close eager faces leaned forward to catch every word that fell from his lips. At the conclusion there was a spontaneous outburst of applause, amounting to a demonstration, indicating how his audience had been deeply moved. The unanim-

GAILANT VIRGINIAN WHO HAS PASSED FOUR SCORE YEARS

By R. W. GRIZZARD.

"Mid din of the battle, 'mid tramp of the host"

Who heard the shrill bugle and answer with yell—

The charge of grim heroes who reek not the cost

Doth all that is noble in mankind reveal."

In the quietude of his hospitable country home, near Skippers, Greensboro county, Va., Lewis H. Foster, Esq., is peacefully spending the remnant of his days on earth. He has held manhood as a sacred gift from the Creator and treasured it accordingly. Though physically weak and weary with his eighty-four years, he is yet in full possession of his mental faculties; though his locks are frosted and his step enfeebled, yet is he optimistic, active in mind, entertaining and hospitable—a Virginia gentleman of the old school type.

Mr. Foster shrinks from publicity. When asked for his photograph and the appended data, he expressed himself to the writer as strongly opposed to any trumpeting or personal posing.

Merit and the highest personal integrity are his. So interesting and unique a character is eminently deserving mention in the "Veteran."

This venerable man is a veteran of two wars—Mexican and between the States. In the heyday of his youth he helped annex Texas to the Union, and thereby garnered a store of experience. His reminiscences are varied and rich. He can relate stirring incidents connected with the campaign, for he followed the stars and stripes from the house and until its proud pennons floated in the halls of the Montezumas. He makes frequent and interesting mention of Generals Taylor and Scott. Mr. Foster went to Mexico in 1847 as a volunteer in a Virginia regiment commanded by Colonel Ham-tranck, of the infantry. He was mustered into service at Richmond and numbered with the second company from Petersburg, whose muster and pay roll Mr. Foster assisted in keeping.

In those far-gone days of old sailing the seas was less a hindrance than now, but, shipping at Fortress Monroe, his command sailed down the Atlantic via South-ern Florida to the Gulf of Mexico, and, effecting the desired landing, marched with the trappings of war through three States of Mexico to Monterey. En route to this latter place there were skirmishes with the Comanches, a name that struck terror to every ear in those martial days of old.

Mr. Foster arrived after hard marching at Buena Vista just too late to participate in the bloody struggle at that place, but recalls seeing about eight degrees equal to that which he has created abroad, there should be no lack of willing hands to uphold him in the great work he is so successfully carrying forward.

St. Louis, Mo., Nov. 28, 1906.

Area of the United States.

The United States Geological Survey has just issued bulletin three hundred and two, by Henry Gannett, which represents the result of conference and co-operation of the Land Office, Census Bureau and Geological Survey in an effort to agree on what constitutes "the area of the United States."

The absence of a standard of measurement for determining the area led to a discrepancy between the tables of the Census Bureau made in 1870 and those of the General Land Office prepared in 1890. The result of the co-operation of the departments is that the area of the United States proper, which is given as three million twenty-six thousand seven hundred and eighty-nine square miles, has been increased over the census figures by eleven hundred and eighty-eight square miles. The bulletin gives the area of Alaska as five hundred and ninety thousand eight hundred and eighty-four; the Philippines, one hundred and fifteen thousand and twenty-six; Hawaii, six thousand four hundred and forty-nine; Porto Rico, three thousand four hundred and thirty-five; Guam, two hundred and ten; Samoa, seventy-seven, and the Panama Canal strip, four hundred and seventy-four square miles.

All of the detached territory is subject to change as the limits become more correctly defined.—Scientific American.

thousand dead Mexicans there. He makes interesting mention of Generals Bragg, Taylor, and Jefferson Davis with his Mississippi regiment. The old veteran recalls the memory of Andrew Jackson, Martin Van Buren, and all subsequent Presidents. After the surrender, he and his army comrades marched five hundred miles to the Rio Grande and took shipping for the States. The mutability of time is strangely emphasized in that he recalls no living comrade of the Mexican War.

"Their bodies are dust. Their good swords rust."

Beginning in the year 1842, Mr. Foster taught school in Virginia and North Carolina for a period of thirty years. Among his pupils are many old and settled men, and these widely scattered over the country. All speak in highest terms of their worthy old preceptor.

The old veteran's War between the States record follows: He was a member of the North Carolina Battalion of Light Artillery, J. W. Moore commander. Mr. Foster never missed a roll call and did not ask for but one furlough during the entire war. He followed the dubious fortunes of war with all the impetuous zeal of a born soldier, and was with General Joseph E. Johnston when he surrendered at Greensboro. His battalion fought at Bentonville in the last engagement in the Old North State. Altogether he was a strenuous life during "the days that tried men's souls," and his war lore is abundant. The venerable soldier has been twice married and has often bereaved of his life companions. He is childless, but by no means forsaken or forlorn; the anxious ministry of kind and loving hands constantly attends him.

He is an enthusiastic and well-informed Mason, having been initiated into the mysteries of the ancient order in the year 1847. The infirmities of age prevent his active participation in the affairs of his lodge, but his old-time zeal for the institution has not abated. He received two or three degrees beyond that of the sublime degree of a Master Mason. But, best of all, this honored old gentleman is a veteran in the Lord's army. He was baptized by Elder Josiah Bailey into the membership of Zion Baptist Church in the year 1862, and has ever since been a member and officer in said church.

It is pleasing and profitable to keep in the foreground of this strenuous period such model characters.—Ed.

In grateful memory of such comrades, let posterity say:

"Never marched men into battle, Braver men with firmer tread, Sifted of all the roar and rattle, Site of dying and the dead, Best ye warriors, from your labors, Rest your banners, worn to rags, Shouted forever are your salutes, Furl'd forever be your flags."

How to Keep Young.

Not a few persons have written 1906 at the head of their letters with a sign at the reminder of increasing age. Women more than men are possessed with a dread of growing old, not realizing that maturity has its charms and compensations. We wish young people often had it better to grow old prematurely than to dread the future. It is essential, if we wish to keep young, to cultivate that hopeful habit of mind so characteristic of youth—the hope which makes one able to say with Browning, "The best is yet to come," and with Lucy Larcom, "Every year's life is larger and deeper and more beautiful in its possibilities." Allied with this attitude of expectancy must be the ability to see the amusing side of the. Worry and vexation over what would better be laughed at result in disfiguring wrinkles. Above all, if the years bring us, as they should, a better understanding of ourselves, a broadening of active human sympathies, a firmer faith in Providence, we shall find life abundantly worth the living, no matter what may be the number of our birthdays.—Western Review.
